The Tithe Applotment Books record the results of a unique land survey taken to determine the amount of tax payable by landholders to the Church of Ireland, the established church until 1869. They are known as the Tithe Applotment Books because the results of this land survey were originally compiled in nearly 2,000 hand-written books. This data set represents a virtual census for pre-Famine Ireland.

<http://search.findmypast.co.uk/search-world-records/new-zealand-birth-index>
 Over 19,000 records have been added to the New Zealand Birth Index. Since 1848, births have been recorded in New Zealand and registration has been compulsory since 1858. Māori births were registered from 1913-1961, separate from the General register. However, some Māori events were recorded in the General system. Since registration was difficult to enforce, many Māori births were never registered. The records are from the combined indexes of both the General and Māori registers.
- * New Zealand Marriage Index
<http://search.findmypast.co.uk/search-world-records/new-zealand-marriage-index>
 Over 10,000 new records have been added to the New Zealand Marriage Index. The records in this index pertain to individuals who were born 120 years or more ago.
- * New Zealand Death Index
<http://search.findmypast.co.uk/search-world-records/new-zealand-death-index>
 Over 32,000 records have been added to the New Zealand Death Index. The collection now contains more than 2.3 million transcripts taken from the combined indexes of both the General and Māori registers.
